

You are working on an important assignment. The student behind you keeps humming and it is distracting you.

How should you respond?

- A. Start humming louder so that you can't hear her hum and only hear yourself.
- B. Turn around and ask her if she could please not hum so that you can concentrate.
- C. Blurt out, "Stop humming! You are driving me crazy!"

Jessica is taking her dog on a walk. She is trying to put the leash on her dog, but the clasp isn't working correctly. She has already tried six times.

How is Jessica feeling?

- A. She is feeling excited.
- B. She is feeling confident.
- C. She is feeling frustrated.

Your mom is ready to leave and doesn't want to be late. You start out the front door and realize you left your homework on your bed.

What should you do?

- A. You should immediately ask your mom if you can hurry back to your room and get it.
- B. You should ask your brother to sneak and get it while you distract your mom even if it takes twice as long.
- C. You should wait and ask after everyone is in the car with their seatbelts buckled.

You are eating some candy. Your little sister comes up to you and puts out her hand.

What is your sister's body language telling you?

- A. She wants you to play with her.
- B. She wants you to go away.
- C. She wants you to give her some of your candy.