

Isaac liked to hide in the background and listen in on the conversations of the other animals. At first, he pretended they were really speaking to him, and they were his friends.

As time passed, however, Isaac grew jealous of the animals because they had real friendships. He was all alone and angry.

Isaac had been listening to his swamp neighbors for so long, he developed a special talent. He discovered his talent by accident while speaking to his only pal, the stump. Isaac realized he could make his voice sound exactly like the voice of each and every animal living in the swamp! His voice imitations were perfect.